Election/Restrictions

1. Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:
  - I. Claims 1-12, drawn to a gene detection system, classified in class 422, subclass 68.1.
  - II. Claims 13-18, drawn to a method for detecting genes, classified in class 435, subclass 6.
  - III. Claim 19, drawn to a chip comprising an electrode on which a probe is immobilized, classified in class 435, subclass 287.2.
2. The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of the following reasons:
  - a. Inventions I and II are related as product and process of use. The inventions can be shown to be distinct if either or both of the following can be shown: (1) the process for using the product as claimed can be practiced with another materially different product or (2) the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product (MPEP § 806.05(h)). In the instant case the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product i.e. the gene detection system comprising immobilized probes and heating and cooling means can be used to synthesize complementary copies of immobilized probes and to create microarrays comprising the probe complements. Additionally, the gene detection system can be used to bind and isolate probe binding proteins and/or peptides.
  - b. Inventions I and III are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because the probe immobilizing support and heating and cooling means of Invention I does not require the electrode substrate and soaking components of the chip of Invention III. The subcombination has separate utility such as a means for electronic movement and isolation of charged molecules.

c. Inventions II and III are related as product and process of use. The inventions can be shown to be distinct if either or both of the following can be shown: (1) the process for using the product as claimed can be practiced with another materially different product or (2) the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product (MPEP § 806.05(h)). In the instant case the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product i.e. the chip comprising an electrode substrate and a soaking component can be used to electronically move and isolate charged molecules.

3. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art because of their recognized divergent subject matter, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

4. Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed (37 CFR 1.143).
